Gov. Beshear and Dr. Steven Stack, commissioner of the Department for Public Health, filed an emergency regulation addressing K-12 COVID-19 reporting requirements pursuant to existing statutes. Under the new regulation, no later than Monday, Sept. 28, all parents and guardians are required to report to the child's school within 24 hours if their child tests positive for COVID-19; and, all schools must report via a secure website, Monday through Friday, every day school is in session, data related to the coronavirus.

Gov. Beshear and Dr. Stack announced new guidance for local school reopening plans. The guidance is in effect as long as the state's positivity rate is less than 6% and the health care system has enough resources. A color-coded map showing incidence rates will provide districts with corresponding guidance. It will be updated every Thursday evening to guide schools for the following week.

Schools in green and yellow areas essentially follow KDE Healthy at Schools guidance. Schools in an orange zone should take enhanced measures, including more aggressive crowd limits, and should consider a variety of factors to determine what mode of instruction they should use.

If a county reaches red, then both in person instruction should be suspended the following week and only remote learning should occur; schools may still use small groups per KDE guidance for special circumstances.

In addition, Dr. Stack said the Kentucky High School Athletic Association has published and continues to update its guidance on COVID-19.

Updated the state's executive order on evictions to reflect the Center for Disease Control's moratorium on residential evictions through Dec. 31.

Under the CDC order, a tenant who signs and submits a declaration to his or her landlord about the inability to timely pay rent cannot be evicted. The CDC order allows landlords to charge and collect fees, penalties and interest for failure to timely pay rent, but prohibits evictions for nonpayment or late payment of such fees, penalties or interest.
