Re: Kentucky County Judge-Executives Support Pre-K for All

Dear Senators and Representatives:

As County Judge/Executives from across the Commonwealth, we urge you to support the Pre-K for All initiative. It would expand Kentucky's voluntary publicly-funded preschool program, so that every Kentucky four-year-old has an opportunity at a strong start.

As the leaders of Kentucky's 120 counties, we know expanded preschool would save families money, boost our local economies, and be an investment in Kentucky's long-term competitiveness.

American families are struggling to pay the bills and lack of childcare is a key reason why. Pre-K for All can help ease the financial burden and boost household earnings by nearly $9,000 dollars each year for at least six years. That's $54,000 more dollars in the pockets of our families, cycling through our local economies, creating and maintaining jobs, and growing our counties.

We've heard it from parents, teachers, and business owners: Pre-K works. But right now, only 14,000 of Kentucky's 54,000 four-year-olds have access to it.

The evidence is overwhelming, and success is undeniable. Pre-K improves statewide kindergarten readiness, boosts high school graduation rates, and raises overall lifetime earnings. It saves parents money, supports working families, and fuels broader workforce participation. In a state where nearly two-thirds of counties lack sufficient childcare, Pre-K is not just about education—it's an economic development investment that will keep Kentucky moving forward.

The research speaks for itself:

- Boosts Kindergarten Readiness: Over half (53.8%) of Kentucky children are already behind their first day of kindergarten. Pre-K for All would close that gap and make sure every Kentucky kid has a firm footing to start school.
- Expands the Workforce: Up to 70,000 Kentuckians are unable to work because they lack childcare. Pre-K for All will let parents reenter the workforce and take advantage of local job opportunities in our counties across Kentucky.

- Raises Household Incomes: A long-term study shows that families with access to Pre-K earn nearly $9,000 more per year - gains that persist for years after their child completes Pre-K.
- Delivers a 10:1 Return on Investment: Every dollar invested in Pre-K yields ten dollars in return—from better jobs and health outcomes to reduced criminal justice costs and increased educational attainment.
- Creates Jobs in Education: Pre-K for All will generate demand for educators and support staff across the state, creating new careers, and helping attract talent to our counties.
- Expands Access Across Kentucky: With 79 of Kentucky's 120 counties having little to no childcare available, this initiative will expand access, create job opportunities, give parents a choice, attract and retain young families, and lay the foundation for academic success.

As County Judge/Executives, we are committed to leading counties where children thrive, families prosper, and business grow.

Our counties and families cannot wait. We urge the General Assembly to make expanding Pre-K access for all Kentucky four-year-olds a top priority in the 2026 Budget Session. Together we can support our working families and build our communities.

Thank you for your leadership and consideration of this urgent matter. We look forward to working with you to build a stronger, more prosperous Commonwealth.

Respectfully,

Dear Senators and Representatives,

As the Judge/Executive of Barren County, I write to express my full support for the Pre-K for All initiative. Expanding access to high-quality preschool is not only an investment in our children — it is a strategic decision that strengthens our workforce, grows our local economy, and gives every Kentucky child a chance to succeed. Across Barren County, I hear from working parents, educators, and employers about the ongoing struggle to find affordable, reliable childcare. For many families, the lack of access to early learning opportunities is keeping parents out of the workforce entirely. By making Pre-K available to all four-year-olds — including those who currently do not qualify — we can remove one of the largest barriers to employment and put thousands of Kentuckians back to work.

If we are serious about expanding Pre-K access, we must also take a hard look at where our resources are going. The growing cost of state-level administration in Frankfort is drawing critical funds away from local communities — funds that could and should be used to support programs like Pre-K for All. Reducing bureaucratic overhead and streamlining government operations would allow us to redirect more dollars to the front lines: our classrooms, families, and children. In addition, school districts across the Commonwealth are being burdened by unfunded mandates and restrictive policies that limit their ability to serve students effectively. Local educators and administrators know their communities best. They should be given more flexibility — not more paperwork — to implement Pre-K programs that meet local needs. Without changes, local school districts are left to absorb increasing costs without the support they deserve.

While many ongoing capital projects and initiatives are well-intentioned, they often fall short of the long-term economic and educational benefits provided by early childhood education. Redirecting even a portion of these funds toward early learning programs would generate meaningful, statewide impact for every county in Kentucky. This could be achieved by reducing allocations to central administrative functions within the Department of Education and instead directing more funding directly to local school districts, where it can be used more effectively to support early learning initiatives.

I urge you to prioritize this initiative in the upcoming 2026 Budget Session and to pursue policies that cut waste, reduce restrictions, and empower communities to do what's best for their children. Let's make smart, forward-thinking choices that support Kentucky families and strengthen the foundation of our future.

Respectfully,

Jamie Bewley Byrd

Pre K 4 All Task Force
Advisory Committee

July 29, 2025

Dear Committee Chair and Members,

I am writing this letter of endorsement for the Governor's Plan for Pre K 4 All. This plan gives 4-year-olds the opportunity to attend preschool if their parents choose to send them. In today's world of chaos, kids need more one on one attention to help facilitate early learning skills. I have 2 grown sons; the oldest attended a structured day care center and the youngest attended public pre-school. No two children are alike or learn at the same capacity so while my oldest son performed extremely well just from a daycare setting, my youngest son needed that extra personal attention and direction for early learning. Every child should have the same opportunity to learn in a classroom setting.

I fully endorse the Governor's plan and hope that you will too! Thank you for your attention to this serious matter.

Respectfully submitted,

Pre-K for All Advisory Committee,

As Carlisle County Judge Executive, I am honored to be able to support the preschool for all initiative for the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Early childhood is a critical period for brain development. Studies have shown that children who attend high-quality preschool enter kindergarten better prepared and have stronger language, math and social skills. But, the sad reality is that not every child has access to this head start, often because of cost, location or lack of availability. This initiative has the power to transform lives and strengthen our society as a whole.

Carlisle County is a small, rural community, with a very small tax base—less than 5,000 in population. Carlisle County falls short on childcare and education before school age. I won't be shy in admitting that we do not have funding to support these children on our own but I also know that in Carlisle County, we have high expectations for high-quality child-care and education. This initiative could and would change that. It would ensure that every child in Kentucky, regardless of income or background, gets a fair chance at success from the very beginning. This isn't just an investment in our children; it is an investment in our future workforce, our economy and our communities.

For Kentucky, this investment is not just beneficial, its essential for competitiveness. Our state currently ranks low in several key economic indicators compared to neighboring states, including a 41st ranking in income. Furthermore, Kentucky lags behind the national average of 62.6% in the labor force participation rate. A recent Kentucky Chamber Report stated that between 40 and 70,000 Kentuckians would rejoin the workforce but would need access to childcare options for their families. With universal preschool, more parents – especially mothers – can enter or re-renter the workforce earlier, contributing to economic productivity. This initiative is a key to economic prosperity and opportunity for our families and economic development for our communities.

Let's consider the immediate economic impact this initiative would have. 4 year old preschool programs have been shown to lead to a 1.2% rise in labor force participation and a 1.5% increase in overall employment, which results in higher total earnings. Let's get ahead, Kentucky. This isn't just the right thing to do; it's the smart thing to do in moving forward and bettering Kentucky.

Thank you,

To the Team Kentucky Pre-K For All Advisory Committee:

As Judge/Executive of Magoffin County and someone who truly cares about education and local jobs, I want to express my strong support for Governor Andy Beshear's Pre-K for All plan. This initiative is a significant step forward for Kentucky's youngest children and will help our workforce, stabilize school funding, and promote economic growth—especially in rural regions like ours.

In Magoffin County, we know firsthand the challenges families face when early childhood education isn't accessible. Many parents are forced to stay home with their kids because of limited childcare options, which means missing out on work opportunities. According to the Cabinet for Health and Family Services, 79 out of Kentucky's 120 counties—including ours—simply don't have enough child care resources. This lack limits job opportunities and holds families back.

On top of this, schools across Kentucky are struggling financially to provide necessary services for the students who are eligible for them. Tight budgets and rising costs have made it increasingly difficult for districts to meet the needs of every child. Too often, schools are forced to stretch limited resources, leaving some kids without the vital support they need to start their education on the right foot.

Before becoming Judge/Executive, I worked as Chief Financial Officer for several school districts, so I've seen up close the positive impact early childhood programs have on rural communities—and the strain placed on schools trying to offer these services without adequate funding. Free pre-K for all doesn't just prepare kids for school and help parents return to work—it also ensures that every child receives the support they deserve while removing a major financial burden off local school districts. With universal funding, schools won't have to scramble to serve only those who qualify; instead, every child benefits, and districts can focus on high-quality education rather than eligibility rules and budget shortfalls.

This program isn't just another policy; it reflects exactly what we want for Magoffin County—supporting working families, empowering our schools, and building a resilient local economy.

I applaud Governor Beshear for championing Pre-K for All, and I hope everyone in Kentucky, especially those concerned with education and the economy, will support this effort. Investing in our youngest learners helps everyone—students, families, schools, and communities—now and far into the future.

Sincerely,

COUNTY ATTORNEY

September 10, 2025

Dear Honorable Members of the Kentucky General Assembly,

I am writing to express the support of the Mason County Fiscal Court for the Commonwealth's vision to implement universal pre-kindergarten programs across the state of Kentucky. Early childhood education plays a critical role shaping the futures of our children and the future of our communities. In Mason County and Northeastern Kentucky, Pre-K for all would provide immeasurable benefits for not only our current generation, but all that follow.

As Judge Executive, I've witnessed firsthand the unprecedented economic growth in our county and the state of Kentucky. We need a workforce that stands ready to accept that challenge with the initial stages involving our youth. Studies have shown there are long-term effects of excluding children from early educational opportunities. Children from disadvantaged backgrounds begin school already behind their peers with universal Pre-K leveling the playing field. Universal pre-kindergarten would help close the gap and ensure that every child who enters kindergarten is ready to succeed. Successful kindergartners lead to successful high school graduates, college graduates, and ultimately, successful citizens who are better equipped to serve in our community.

Universal pre-k would also relieve much of the juggling act many new parents face today given the rising cost of childcare. Parents are struggling to balance work and family responsibilities while living on one income. With universal pre-k, both parents could enter the workforce, increase family incomes, and increase opportunities for all family members.

We urge all partners across the state to attack barriers such as funding, operational and educational space, and staffing that would enable Pre-K and empower our youth from the educational jumpstart they'd receive from this program. Mason County Fiscal Court urges you to consider the impact that universal pre-kindergarten could have on the future of the state of Kentucky. I applaud the efforts of Governor Beshear's leadership in making universal pre-k a reality for every child in Kentucky and look forward to Kentucky's bright future!

All the best,

Dear Kentucky Senators and Representatives,

I am joining Mayors across Kentucky who are supporting the Pre-K for All initiative.

The need for voluntary, publicly funded preschool unites Kentucky. I am very concerned that in Fayette County only 41-50% of our children enter kindergarten prepared to learn.

The benefits of Pre-K for All are undeniable, and would have an impact on every Kentucky county. Pre-K for All would grow our labor force, boost take home pay, save families in out-of-pocket child care costs, improve educational outcomes long-term, grow our economy and eliminate child care deserts.

Pre-K for All has a record of success in many states, including Alabama, Georgia, Iowa, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

As Kentuckians, we have a history of pulling together to improve our children's education. Pre-K for All is important enough for us to do it again. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Linda Gorton

Dear Members of the Kentucky General Assembly:

On behalf of the Kentucky Association of School Superintendents (KASS), representing 171 school superintendents across the Commonwealth, I write to express our strong support for the Pre-K for All initiative and to urge you to make expanding voluntary preschool access a priority in the 2026 Regular Session of the Kentucky General Assembly.

Kentucky's superintendents share your goal: to ensure that every child in our Commonwealth has the opportunity to reach their full potential. Expanding access to high-quality preschool is one of the most impactful steps we can take toward that goal.

There is wisdom in the old adage that the floor determines the ceiling. The better prepared our children are when they enter kindergarten, the more likely they are to thrive throughout their K-12 experience, graduating ready for college, career, and citizenship. High-quality preschool builds that foundation, improving academic outcomes, supporting social-emotional development, and reducing the need for costly interventions later on.

Kentucky has offered publicly funded preschool for more than 30 years, currently serving children with qualifying disabilities and those from families earning below 160% of the federal poverty line. Today, roughly 27%, or about 14,500 of Kentucky's 54,000 four-year-olds are served by public preschool. We can and must do better.

Research and experience from states such as Oklahoma, Alabama, Iowa, and Georgia show that children who attend preschool are more likely to be prepared for kindergarten, proficient in reading and math, graduate from high school, and pursue higher education. They are also less likely to be chronically absent, face disciplinary issues, or require special education services.

While superintendents strongly support expanding preschool access, we also know that success will depend on addressing several critical issues that vary from community to community. KASS intends to convene a work group to collaborate with the legislature and stakeholders on the following priorities:

- Facility Needs: Provide creative flexibility and dedicated funding to address facility space challenges, including support for innovative public-private partnerships.
- Workforce Capacity: Ensure a robust pipeline of qualified early childhood educators and support staff, with competitive compensation and professional supports.
- Operational Sustainability: Establish reliable, long-term funding streams to sustain expanded preschool programs and ensure equitable access across Kentucky.

Importantly, we believe this expansion should follow a responsible, phased-in approach over time, building capacity deliberately and strategically to ensure that every four-year-old in Kentucky will ultimately have access to a voluntary, high-quality preschool experience.

We cannot afford to let Kentucky's children fall behind. They are the future leaders, innovators, and workforce that will drive our state forward. With thoughtful planning, strategic investment, and a phased implementation plan, expanding preschool access is both achievable and essential.

KASS and our member superintendents stand ready to partner with you to design and implement a preschool expansion plan that addresses real-world challenges and delivers on the promise of better outcomes for every child.

Thank you for your continued commitment to Kentucky's students and families—and for your leadership in making Pre-K for All a reality.

Respectfully,
